EVERYONE DESERVES THE TREAT OF
A SPA DAY AND TO FEEL BEAUTIFUL

FOUNDED BY FAMILY FOR EVERYONE

Founded in 2011 by sisters Grace and Charlotte Locklear, Raleigh's Lumiere day spa has gradually expanded throughout the area, opening two new locations in the last year.

Grace, who got her start as a freelance masseuse, and Charlotte, a food and wine critic with the News & Observer had a vision.

There are plenty of places to go for simply a manicure, a massage, or a wine tasting, but where can you get the full experience?

Luxury spas can come across as elitist or snobby, but the Locklear sisters believe everyone deserves to be treated like a spa day and to feel beautiful. Lumiere takes pride in a staff friendly and open to all kinds of North Carolinians.

After deciding to go into business together, Grace and Charlotte set out to create a spa with a diverse range of offerings for whatever your pampering needs are. They provide high-tech dermatological treatments, as well as all-natural skin care, and five types of massage services. Everything from the nail polish used in pedicures to the salt scrubs have been thoroughly researched to ensure they are free of harmful chemicals.

The massage therapists are all credentialed through the NC Licensed Massage and Bodywork Therapists Board. The cosmetologists and estheticians are all credentialed through the NC Board of Cosmetic Art Examiners. All of Lumiere's professionals have over five years of experience prior to joining our team.

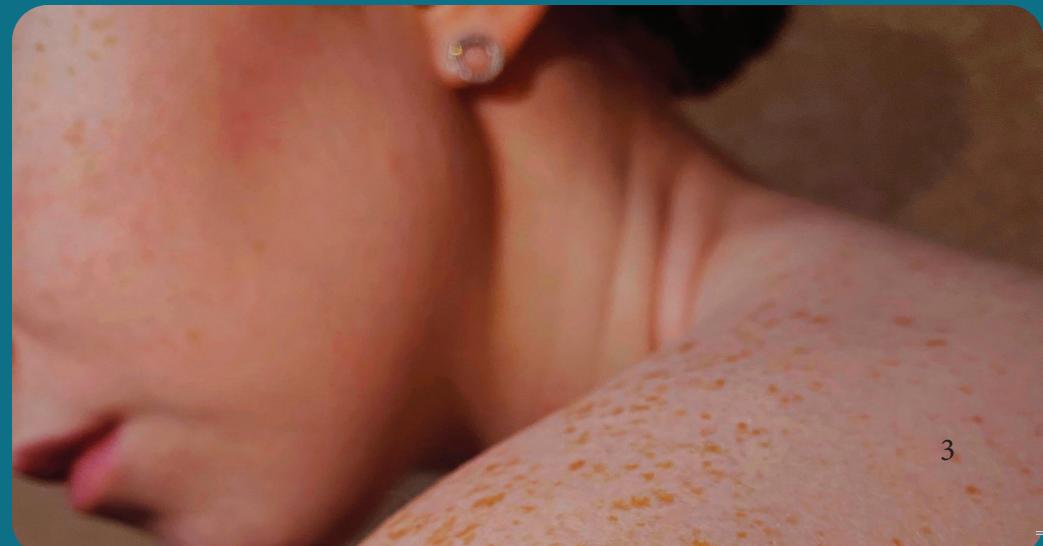

Charlotte leads the culinary team, constantly traveling the state to find the highest quality local fruits, wines, ciders, and cheeses. The offerings vary by season, ensuring a consistently fresh selection.

Grace and Charlotte believe in environmentally sustainable business practices, so you can feel good about the care you're receiving.

Lumiere has earned countless five-star reviews from clients and recently gained national attention after being profiled in Vogue. Previously, local magazines Our State and Walter praised the spa for its commitment to the local economy and sustainability.
